To Our Fellow TEGNA Shareholders,

We would like to respond to TEGNA's rebuttal presentation published on April 15, 2021. The presentation is deeply flawed and is premised on a fundamental mischaracterization:

TEGNA uses the wrong peer group.

TEGNA is a pure-play television broadcaster. TEGNA's presentation benchmarks itself to media companies Meredith and Scripps, which have significant non-television assets. Meredith derives most of its revenue from its magazine/newspaper business and only 27% of revenue from its comparable television broadcasting business. Similarly, Scripps has a significant national media business, which includes Triton (SaaS business model), Newsy (national news network), and Katz (operator of multicast networks).

TEGNA should instead compare itself to Nexstar and Gray, which are pure-play television broadcasters. When comparing TEGNA to the right peer group, its underperformance is apparent. TEGNA's margins continue to significantly lag its peers, and have declined over the last few years, all while its peers have seen an increase. TEGNA's operational underperformance versus its peers' is commensurate with its share price underperformance.

The obfuscation of facts and gaslighting of shareholders is something the TEGNA management team has done previously, and continues to do. This is concerning in itself, but begs the bigger question:

Why does the Board allow this to happen?

Not one member of the Board has direct experience in local television broadcasting. While this is a problem in itself, it also highlights entrenchment amongst its management team and long-standing Board members. Mr. Lougee has been head of TEGNA's broadcasting assets since 2007. The two other directors we are looking to replace this year, Mr. Shapiro and Mr. Elias, are the two longest serving directors, and joined the Board in 2007 and 2008, respectfully. Since 2007, TEGNA (and its predecessor Gannett) has seen its equity value decrease and its great assets flounder. During this time the Company's true peers, Nexstar and Gray, experienced 25x and 5x respective increases in their equity value.

Poor governance leads to poor results.

We only need to look at CEO compensation to understand the level of entrenchment and poor governance that exists at TEGNA. During the pandemic and amidst social unrest that occurred last year, demand for local news skyrocketed. Americans relied on TEGNA's essential workers to provide them with critical local news. 2020 was a difficult year. TEGNA's share price declined by 15% and TEGNA responded by putting all of its workers through a rotation of unpaid furlough. At the same time, the CEO's compensation package increased by 16% to a record level.

Instead of providing transparency regarding Mr. Lougee's compensation increase, TEGNA claimed Mr. Lougee's "cash compensation decreased by 5%". But, the Board actually made Mr. Lougee whole (and then some) by increasing his stock awards by 32%. Did the Board also consider making its furloughed employees whole?

TEGNA continues to try to distract shareholders and refuses to focus on pertinent issues.

Over the last few months, issues of discrimination and racial insensitivity have come to light, including an incident of racial insensitivity involving CEO Dave Lougee. Mr. Lougee finally admitted to his actions and the Board concluded a "review" of the matter in just a few days – without even reaching out to the wronged party. According to media reports, TEGNA Board member Neal Shapiro also recently faced his own racial insensitivity issues as CEO of WNET and his employees are calling for him to resign.

It is shocking that TEGNA's Board was willing to spend $29 million trying to disparage its largest shareholder, but decided to forgo a comprehensive investigation into its own significant DE&I incidents.

The Board at TEGNA has overseen years of discrimination and prejudice at multiple levels of the Company including at the Board, management and station-level. After receiving multiple correspondences related to acts of widespread discrimination at the Company, we have requested records related to what TEGNA has done to address discrimination. The Company has refused to provide us with information on these detailed allegations and, for the little information they have offered, they have asked us to sign a non-disclosure agreement.

The one statement we can agree on in TEGNA's April 15 investor presentation is its acknowledgement that TEGNA "has work to do."

Change is necessary.

We ask that you withhold votes from TEGNA's three long-serving directors and instead vote for nominees on the WHITE card.

Sincerely,

Soohyung Kim
